SC11 Introduction to Roman Art and Architecture
There are a limited number of places available on this course. This lecture-only module is an introductory survey of the development and major artistic and technical achievements of Greek and Roman architecture, sculpture, and painting. The course places art and architecture in its social, political and cultural context. It explores themes such as the representation of the human form, the use of narrative and mythology in art, and urbanization, and it looks at the works of individual artists. It traces the development of architectural forms, such as temples, theatres and Roman baths with attention to many of the iconic buildings and sites of the ancient world, including the Parthenon, Delphi and Olympia, the Colosseum, the Pantheon and Pompeii.

Lecturer: Dr Giorgos Papantoniou

Fee: €175 for the course. The concession rate for the course is €90.

Time and Place:
Lecture 1: Wednesdays 10am Venue: Davis Theatre (Room 2043), Arts Building
Lecture 2: Thursdays 2pm Venue: Emmet Theatre (Room 2039), Arts Building

Duration:
This lecture-only module comprises of two lectures per week over one term commencing Wednesday 24 January 2024.

SC12 Introduction to Roman History
This lecture-only module provides an introductory survey of the history of the Greek and Roman world, from the Greek Archaic age (c. 700 BC) to the death of Augustus in AD 14. The main trends and issues of this period will be explored including colonisation, imperialism, war, the Athenian invention of democracy, the rise of Alexander, and the emergence of Rome as a major power in the Mediterranean. There will also be discussion of the main historical sources.

Fee: €175 for the course. The concession rate for the course is €90.

Time and Place:
Lectures 1 & 2: Tuesdays 9-11am Venue: Synge Theatre (Room 2039), Arts Building

Duration:
This lecture-only module comprises of two lectures per week over one term commencing Tuesday 23 January 2024.
SC13 Greek and Roman Mythology and Religion Part II
What is myth? How do myths deal with fundamental human concerns about who we are and the world we live in? What is the relationship between myth and religion? Why did the Greeks and Romans worship many gods, believe in oracles, or perform animal sacrifice? This lecture-only module is an introduction to the major myths and religions of the classical world using the full range of primary source material: literary, artistic and archaeological. It explores the functions of myth within society and the various theories of myth. The first half of the course will focus on themes such as the creation of myths in the wider context of Near Eastern mythology, the character of the Olympian gods, heroes and their monstrous opponents, divine-human relations, and the major mythic cycles of the Trojan war, and the Atreus and Theban sagas. The second half of the course will explore the nature of Greek and Roman religion in its social context. It considers key elements of ritual action: sacrifice, rites of passage, festivals, as well as the diverse ancient beliefs on death and the afterlife and the role of mystery religions. This lecture-only course will be illustrated.

Lecturer: Dr Suzanne O’Neill

Fee: €90 for the course. The concession rate for the course is €60.

Time and Place:
Wednesdays 3pm Venue: Davis Theatre (Room 2043), Arts Building

Duration:
This lecture-only module comprises of one lecture per week over one term commencing Wednesday 24 January 2024

History

SH06 The Hundred Years War c.1337-1453

The Hundred Years War was in reality a series of wars, on both land and sea, arising primarily from the political and dynastic conflicts of the kings of England and France. It was fought mainly in France but also engulfed Brittany, Scotland, the Iberian kingdoms, the Netherlands and other countries. The first part of the wars is retailed in considerable detail by the contemporary chronicler, Jean Froissart, whose powerful portrait of warfare and political rivalry is set against a backdrop of chivalric endeavour and glory.

Fee: €90 for the course. The concession rate for the course is €60.

Time and Place: Thursdays 11am Venue: Emmet Theatre (Room 2037), Arts Building

Duration:
This lecture-only module comprises of one lecture per week over one term commencing Thursday 25 January 2024
SH07 Climate and environment in the pre-modern world

Climate history is a rapidly evolving field of study that aims (1) to reconstruct climate conditions over past centuries and millennia and (2) understand how societies perceived and responded to changing climates and extreme weather. These aims can be best achieved by combining evidence from both natural and human archives. In this module we will examine the historical development of natural archives such as tree-rings and ice-cores and introduce how they can be used to reveal climate variations in the past. We will then examine how this information can be combined with evidence from human archives, including written and archaeological records, to understand the social impacts of climate change and extreme weather. In doing so, we will draw upon case studies of major episodes of climate change from the ancient and medieval eras. These case studies will bring us from ancient Egypt and Babylonia to the ancient American Southwest, and from there to Medieval Ireland, Japan, China and beyond. In these places we will examine the role that explosive volcanic eruptions and rapid changes in the Sun’s output of energy played in causing extreme weather that was often accompanied by major human impacts such as famine, disease and conflict, before studying the ways in which ancient and medieval societies attempted to cope with these impacts and adapt to changing climates.

Fee:
€90 for the course. The concession rate for the course is €60.

Time and Place:
Thursdays 1pm Venue: Davis Theatre (Room 2043), Arts Building

Duration:
This lecture-only module comprises of one lecture per week over one term commencing Thursday 25 January 2024

SH08 Europe 1500-1800: Power and Culture

This module explores the political and cultural history of Europe during the early modern period. It analyses the efforts of reformers to revive their churches and societies during the sixteenth century. It then examines the legacy of these reform movements and considers how cultural divisions as well as competition for power led to prolonged periods of conflict within states and between states during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. This module then charts the emergence during the eighteenth century of new ways of thinking about private life and popular culture and of new ideas about science, society and the self of the Enlightenment. Finally, it explores how these ideas contributed to political crisis following the French Revolution.

Lecturers: Dr Graeme Murdock; Dr Joseph Clarke

Fee: €175 for the course. The concession rate for the course is €90.

Time and Place:
Lecture 1: Wednesdays 3pm Venue: Burke Theatre (Room 1008), Arts Building

Global integration is not only a fact of modern life, but of modern history writing. The interconnectedness of distant societies and states, and powerful forces making for social, cultural and economic interaction have prompted significant scholarly assessment.

This lecture-only module investigates some of the events and processes which have led to a more integrated world order between the mid-nineteenth century and the later twentieth century. For most of that period much of the world was carved up between a number of intercontinental empires centred in Europe. How those empires grew, exerted control and in due course retreated will be the particular focus of the module. But other processes, too, will be considered, not least the integrating force of economic changes and the spreading power of capitalism across the globe. Attention will be given to the evolution of ideologies of imperialism and social Darwinism and to whether or not such ideologies impacted upon changing global power relationships. The module, while broadly chronological in approach, will focus on a wide range of themes in cultural, economic and political history.

SA14 Building Modernity in Paper and Stone
Through the study of buildings and architectural publications (1500-1700) this module examines the role of architecture in the construction of modernity. To do so, architectural production in the early modern period will be studied under three lenses: architecture and antiquity/modernity, architecture and power and, architecture and the New Science. This module recognizes architectural publications as an important part of the architect’s work and will include visits to study some important architectural books kept at Early Printed Books in Trinity Library.
Students in this module will reflect on the formal differences that have led historians to classify works under Renaissance, Mannerist and Baroque architecture and reflect on the usefulness - or not - of these art historical categories to describe the architecture of the early modern period. Students will consider the relationship between architectural theory and practice and how ideas shape architecture to propose alternative readings of early modern architectural production.

SA15 Painting in Europe in the Long Renaissance

This module is an exploration of Italian art – painting and sculpture - from c.1300 to c.1700 in the major centres of Florence, Rome, Venice, Naples, and Milan. The era is distinguished by a revived interest in Italy’s classical past and the emergence of humanist philosophies, and the impact of both on art over a long timeline will be investigated. The evolution of religious subject matter will be analysed via a number of different typologies – the fresco cycle, the altarpiece, the sculpted figure. The emergence and development of secular themes, including representations of classical mythology, will also be considered. The module will examine evolving stylistic debates around the values of naturalism and classicism over time, and the ways in which artists reflected on the very concept of the “Renaissance” in different artistic centres. The role of patronage, both civic and private, and the rising status of the artist will feature prominently, and particular attention will be paid to artistic processes and means of production.

Centre for Gender and Women’s Studies

GS01 Gender: History, Culture and Representation

‘The story is no longer about the things that have happened to women and men and how they have reacted to them; instead it is about how the subjective and collective meanings of women and men as categories of identity have been constructed.’ (Joan Scott, Gender and the Politics of History, New York, 19988, p.6). This lecture-only module will examine the histories and representations of gender, seeking to understand how gender is constructed by societies, institutions and individuals, through the critical analysis of texts, works of art and public actions. Gender, its role, its construction and its historiography will be brought together by scholars across the school in an interdisciplinary module. The operation of gender ‘as a tool of analysis’ will be examined in histories of the body, sexuality, medicine, religion, politics, institutions and representations in a variety of texts and contexts which will show the inherent instability and elusive nature of many gendered identities.

Fee: €90 for the course. The concession rate for the course is €60.
Time and Place: Tuesdays 1pm Emmet Theatre (Room 2037), Arts Building
Duration: This lecture-only module comprises of one lecture per week over one term commencing Tuesday 23 January 2024.
S001 A World on the Move: Migration and Colonisation from Prehistory to Present

Human beings have always been on the move: sometimes by choice as colonisers, traders or travellers, and at other times by necessity, as migrants escaping difficult or dangerous circumstance or seeking better opportunities. Migration, the movement of people from one place to another, can be voluntary or forced, temporary or permanent, and may be driven by a complex range of factors including economic, social, political, or environmental considerations. Colonisation, on the other hand, refers to the acquisition of new lands and resources and is often accompanied by the subjugation of one group of people by another through military force. Conquests have been a common feature throughout human history and may be motivated by the desire to acquire new territory, wealth, power or resources, or in the pursuit of religious or ideological goals, sometimes leading to forced migration to new lands.

This series of sixteen lectures (eight in each term) will explore the history of human migration from prehistory to the present-day global migration crisis and will examine the social, economic, cultural, religious and political factors that have driven migration. Lectures will cover a wide range of topics including why people migrate, the impact of migration on societies, customs and cultures, the effects of physical changes to the urban and rural landscapes as well as the challenges faced by both migrant and host communities.

Lectures will be given by experts in their field from the School of Histories and Humanities and will give a unique, long-term perspective on one of the most important issues of our times.

Fee:
€100 per term/Concession €60 per term.
*The concession rate is now available to all those retired, over 65s and to the unwaged, including second and third level students.

Time and Place: Mondays 7 – 8 p.m. Venue Swift Theatre, Arts Building. This course will take place in-person on campus and will also be live streamed. Lectures will not be recorded.

Duration:
This lecture-only module comprises of one lecture per week for eight weeks recommencing 22 January 2024.
SO02 Introduction to Irish Family History

This is a continuation class from semester 1

Family History isn’t just about the past: learning about our origins allows people to get down to the granular details of our ancestors’ lives. It enables people to construct their own family narrative and their personal identity. This lecture-only module is taught through a series of eight lectures per term over two terms by Fiona Fitzsimons & Brian Donovan of the Irish Family History Centre (Eneclann). The course covers a broad sweep of Irish history (1650s to 1950s), and is deeply rooted in the sources. The focus is on the records generated by churches, central and local government, enterprises, families and individuals; exploring what section of the Irish population is documented in these records, and how to interpret the evidence. Where record collections were destroyed, do any collateral records survive that contain relevant information?

The fee includes free access to the largest Irish collection online, www.Findmypast.ie It will also provide support for all participants to construct a simple family history portfolio over sixteen weeks, including creating a family profile; research to collect documentary evidence; building a family tree; and writing a simple report.

Fee:
€125 per term/ Concession €90 per term.

Time and Place:
Mondays 6 – 7 p.m. Venue: Swift Theatre. These classes will be taught on campus and will be live streamed on Zoom. Classes will not be recorded.

Duration: This lecture-only module comprises of one lecture per week for eight weeks over recommencing 22 January 2024

SO03 Irish Family History: Intermediate Level

This is a continuation class from semester 1

Building on the theoretical foundations of the first year, we begin to move into experiential learning with the option of project work in term 2. We explore the Irish diaspora in all its aspects (military, mercantile, civilian, political and criminal exiles and convicts, adventurers, orphans) anywhere they went, and where sources survive, in Irish and overseas archives. In term two we will turn a spotlight on demographic groups that are more challenging to trace: finding women in the sources; researching Irish Travellers before 1950; and children in care 1840s to 1952. There will be a continuing emphasis on the appropriate methodology to use in family and social history, for a successful research outcome.

Please note: This is a lecture-only course and does not include access to computers on campus. Participants must have access to their own computers at home for follow up clinics and research.

Fee:
€125 per term/ Concession €90 per term.

Time and Place:
Tuesdays 6 – 7 p.m. LIVE ON ZOOM

Duration: This lecture-only module comprises of one lecture per week for eight weeks recommencing 23 January 2024.
